U.S. Hostages Moved From Iran Ministry

By Phil Davison

TEHRAN - Three U.S. hostages held at the Iranian Foreign Ministry for 14 months have been moved to a secret location shared by some of the other 49 U.S. capilves, according to diplomatic sources.

Government spokesman Ahmad Azizi told the Pars news agency that the three, including charge d'affaires Bruce Laingen, had been shifted late Saturday "to a more appropriate place of residence." No details were officially disclosed, but the sources said the three men were taken in the night to one of the secret retreats where the other hostages are held.

It would be the first reunion between the three and their fellow captives since the hostages were seized Nov. 4, 1979. One diplomat quoted govern-ment officials as saying the trans-fer of the three Americans was not connected with U.S.-Iranian negotiations aimed at freeing the hos-tages. But there was immediate speculation in diplomatic circles that the move might be linked with Iran's plans for the captives.

Tehran has promised to release the hostages within 24 hours if Washington meets Iran's demands, or try them as spies if it does not. The state radio has warned that execution can be the penalty for espionage under Islamic law.

A diplomat from the Swiss Embassy, which handles U.S. interests, visited the Foreign Ministry Sunday to request an explanation for the transfer of the three captives, the only hostages Swiss diplomats have been allowed to visit. The diplomat said the Swiss government was studying the ex-planation and declined further

Reagan Team Reappraises U.S. Tactics

WASHINGTON - The foreign olicy team of President-elect Reagan has begun compiling an inventory of options as part of a "zero-based approach" to the problem of the American hostages a Iran, which Mr. Reagan appears likely to inherit on inauguration day Jan. 20. Sources in the Reagan camp, while saying that no decisions have been made, suggest that the cur-rent consensus of senior advisers favors a lower-temperature policy designed to improve the bargain-ing position of the United States in the long run, rather than high confrontation designed to bring an immediate day of reckoning. The captivity of the 52 Ameri-cans ended its 14th month Sunday with Iranian authorities consider ing the Carter administration's third, and probably final, full-scale response to Iran's announced conditions for the bostages' release. State Department sources said there was no authoritative word from Tehran about the official re action, but reports of intense political infighting strengthened doubts

in Washington that the U.S. pro-posals would be accepted.

PARIS Chanel fashion store in central Paris Sunday, blowing out windows and doors, shredding expen-sive clothing, smashing perfume bottles and damaging two cars on the street in front.

Firemen quickly extinguished a fire kindled by the explosion, which police said was caused by a bomb made from a fuel-filled can and a gasolinesoaked rag

An anonymous caller telephoned Agence France-Presse and said that the explosion was set off by an organization called the Guadeloupe Liberation Army to force the departure of "French colonialist forces" from the French West Indies. During the past year, the group has claimed re-an economic crisis, is reluctant to put taxpayers' money into faltering state enterprises. Aides said she is exasperated at BL's continuing labor troubles. Newspaper reports said Mrs.

Thatcher planned to give the company only one-third of the £1.4 billion; with the remainder dependent on BL's production performance and labor relations. Government spokesmen declined comment.

In a radio interview Sunday re-conded before the strike was sus-pended, Mrs. Thatcher said: "I hope that they will not strike themselves or their fellows out of jobs."

She criticized the unions for making the Metro strike official and said the new model was a good product but would be endangered if potential overseas customers were put off by continuing disputes.

BL executives have warned that without the government handont, the company faces collapse, with the loss of 70,000 jobs plus as many as 500,000 more in related components industries in the Midlands.

BL lost £93.4 million in the first six months of last year, nearly double the loss in the same period of 1979. The government has already pamped £1.2 billion into the company over the last few years.

Although neither side will say it even privately, the result of the process might be that the Reagan administration will find its dealings with both allies somewhat plified. It appears increasingly clear that France and West Germany will have a harder time working out joint policies that would situate them between the Americans and Russians.

The central element of change, as seen by a West German with access to the thinking of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, is that the events of 1980, notably the Afghan and Polish criscs, have reinforced the position of those French policy-

He and others have found that cloning is progressively more difficult as frogs grow older. They have not been able to produce an adult frog from a oucle-us of another adult. This has raised the possibility that the ar-chive of information within a cell oucleus needed to produce a new individual may become irretrievable in an adult.

'o Kill Kidnapped Judge Cloning is the production of a plant or animal identical with one from which a cell or cell nucleus has been taken and activated to become a complete organism. In plants, the procedure, using a cutting is relatively rou-tioe. Cloning has been performed to a limited extent in frogs and other amphibians, but the possibility of cloning mammals had not previously been demonstrated. The mice were cloned by taking nuclei from embryonic rather than soult cells, the scientists reported. Whether it will be possible to produce clones from adult mice or other adult mammals, including man, remains UDCERTSID. Some researchers hope to mass-produce prize livestock in this manner. Others believe such experiments can provide an understanding of the development of individuals from embryos to adults, including the origin of birth defects.

Inserted Into Egg -In the mouse experiments, each clone was produced by taking a nucleus obtained from a mouse embryo at an early stage of development and inserting it into a fertilized egg from another mouse. The original nuclear material in that egg was then extracted, leaving only the inserted nucleus. who is from the Jackson Labora-

The egg, after being cultured about four days, was placed in the womb of a mouse that then gave birth to an offspring with all the genetic features of the embryo from which the oucleus several scientific meetings and had been taken. The offspring bore no relationship to the mouse whose egg had been used or to the mother that bore it.

Two of the three mouse clones later produced seemingly normal offspring. The third died after seven weeks, but an autopsy revealed no abnormalities related to the cloning. Earlier reports that mammals, and even a human being, had been cloued have never been authenticated or taken seriously by biologists

Assigning New Roles

The achievement shows that cloning, because it has been successfully performed in amphibians, is also possible with embryonic mammals, presumably including humans. It also sug-gests that the ability of amphibians to regenerate body parts may not be entirely beyond reach in mammals.

Regeneration would be possible if genetic informatioo within the ouclei of cells of an adult could be reactivated to perform roles, such as producing a new limb or new individual, other than those assigned to that specialized cell.

Specially prepared mice also received 44 embryos taken from white mice and not subject to nuclear transplants. The added embryos enabled the prepared mice to produce litters of normal size. They all became pregnantand gave birth to a total of 35 mice. All but the three mice recognized as clones were white. None had the black fur of the strain that provided the egg cells.

The three clones had the color of the strains from which the transplanted nuclei were derived. Two, a male and female, were gray. The third was an agouti female. Tiny samples of tissue were taken from the car, tail and skin of these mice to he cultured for genetic screening. Enzymes from the mice were also analyzed as genetic markers. LONDON — British Prime Min-ister Margaret Thatcher said Sun-day that her government's policies were paving the way for Britain to grow strong again despite econom-ic difficulties. In a radio broadcast, she said: "We can become a very formidable nation once again."

Mrs. Thatcher acknowledged the grave economic situation, par-ticularly the seriousness of unemployment, which stands at 9.3 percent of the work force. But, referring to her government's austere and controversial monetarist policies, she said: "The things we are doing are absolutely right to in-crease industrial competitiveness."

In the next year, Mrs. Thatcher said, the government must continsaid, the government must contin-ue to pursue policies that keep the money supply in line with the sup-ply of goods and services, that promote industrial competitiveness and that preserve incentives.

Deriving hope from falling infla-tion rates and evidence of new companies starting up, she said that the challenge to British industry was to achieve good designs, good delivery dates and good val-plants, the nucleus was extracted by a glass tube, or pipette, honed to hairlike sharpness. Uoder observation with a microscope, the pipette, controlled by a mechanical micromanipulator, was inserted into a cell taken from a mouse embryo at an early stage of development (the spherical, or blastocyst, stage, reached a few days after fertilization). The pipette was then inserted into an egg from another mouse so recently fertilized that the sperm nucleus had not vet joined with the egg oucleus. The pipette was then used to extract the two original ouclei.

Altogether, 542 transplants were performed. Of these, 363, including the three that produced live mice, were of ouclei derived from the inner cell mass of an embryo at the blastocyst stage. It is the inner cell mass that evolves into the fetus.

Outer Cell Nuclei

The remaining ouclei were from cells forming the outer part of the blastocyst sphere, or the trophectoderm. These cells oormally evolve into such structures as the uterus and umbilical cord. Their nuclei were apparently in-capable of being sufficiently ac-

The Associated Press NAIROBI — Official Kenyan sources said Sunday that the man who bombed the Norfolk Hotel on New Year's Eve was an Arab who left Kenya bours before the explo-sion on a flight beaded for Saudi Arabia.

Binaisa Reported possible. To Enter Kenya

United Press International KAMPALA, Uganda — God-frey Binaisa, the former Ugandan president, entered Kenya from Uganda last week, according to well-placed government sources in Kampala. His current whereabouts is unknown.

Mr. Binaisa was overthrown in a military coup in May and replaced by a military commission, which ruled Uganda through last month's elections. One of the first acts of President Milton Obote, whose Uganda Peoples Congress won the elections, was to free Mr. Binaisa from eight months of house arrest on corruption charges.

A Kampala official said Mr. Binaisa was briefly detained by Kenyan immigration authorities at Busia when he attempted to enter Kenya. He was permitted to con-tinue to Nairobi, where he reportedly was again detained, only after Kenyan authorities had consulted with their Ugandan counterparts in Kampala, who raised no objec-tion to his leaving Uganda.

Chad President Thanks Libyans For Help in War

The Associated Press TRIPOLI, Libya --- Chad Presi-dent Goukouni Oueddei has arrived in Tripoli and thanked Libya for helping him win the civil war in his nation, the Libyan news agency JANA reports. Mr. Goukouni's forces last month defeated a northern faction led by former Defense Minister Hissene Habre.

"After the victory of the revolution and the defeat of the forces of the rebel Habre, we launch an appeal to the Libyan Arab people, who remained at our side during our long struggle, to maintain its aid and support to the people of Chad so we may develop and re-construct our country," JANA quoted Mr. Goukouni as saying when he arrived on Friday eve-

A key provision of the new proposal is reportedly the desposit of from $5 billion to $6 billion of Iran's frozen assets - the amount relatively unencumbered by lawsuits in the United States - in the Algerian Central Bank.

The Iranians are to take possession of the money when the hos-tages are released. The remainder of the assets are to be released as claims against them are processed by an international arbitration panel. The total of the frozen assets has been estimated at up to $14 billion. Whether this proposal will be acceptable to the Iranians — who had previously come up with a plan for the deposit of "guaran-tees" in the Algerian Central Bank with a $24-billion price tag - remains to be seen.

One important factor may be the issue of the late shah's wealth. The new U.S. proposal is not known to have offered any financial guarantees for the return of the fortune of the Pahlavi family.

Since much of the late shah's money is now presumed to have been taken out of the United States to avoid any government ac-tion in court, the question may be largely symbolic. Nonetheless, it is important to the revolutionaries in Iran who see it as a way of forcing the United States to finally renounce it connections with the shah_ Another factor in whether a resalution is to be reached may be the role played by the Algerian emis-sales. Executive Affairs Minister Behzad Nabavi indicated last week that it was possible that some other approach than the $24-billion guarantee plan might meet with Iranian approval, if it is ac-cepted by the Algerian government. The text of the initial U.S. response and a later clarification in-dicated that in addition to a promise of noninterference, the United States agreed to unfreeze the assets, revoke all economic and financial sanctions, to cancel and nullify legal claims and to freeze and help identify the shah's

Degree of Despair

Conversations with Communist officials in Belgrade, Budapest, East Berlin and Prague revealed a familiar kind of defensiveness born of ingrained suspicion of any Western discussion partner — combined this time with a degree of despair over the size of the political and economic problems confronting all of the party leaderships.

In Belgrade, it was despair over the continuation of inflation at an annual rate of more than 30 percent and the increasing foreign debt

In Budapest the subject was the drastie shifts projected for the Hungarian economy in the next five-year plan. It projects an overall annual growth rate of 3 percent but calls for a 20-percent rate of growth in some industrial sectors. The Hungarians responsible for the plan are painfully aware of the severe dislocations that such unevenness in development can bring.

In East Berlin, the party leaders were pleased with last year's gross national product growth of 4.5 percent and the plans for a 5-percent growth rate in 1981. But they are unhappy about the chill in rela-tions which East Germany depends for a fair portion of its relative prosperity.

They place the blame mainly on West German Chancellor Heimut Schmidt, whom they accuse of having insulted their party chief, Erich Honecker, by canceling a scheduled visit last September with a brusque telephone call instead of a pobte written note, as is diplomatically customary. Brzezinski Declines To Provide Senators With Files on Haig reporters and defending Mr. Nix-on in the Watergate scandals, and

By Adam Clymer New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, said that he had declined to supply Senate Democrats with the National Security Council's files on Alexander Haig Jr. He said he would not cooperate with "some indiscriminate witch hunt" against Gen. Haig, President-elect Reagan's choice for secretary of state.

Mr. Brzezinski said Saturday that he might he able to satisfy the senators' request if they made it quite specific and if White House counsel were satisfied that the doctrine of executive privilege would not be violated.

He said in a telephone interview that he intended to "be as helpful as I can." But he also said that the question as to whether an exhaus tive inquiry into Gen. Haig's record would be good for the country "depends very much on how it's done and what the motives are.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, the senior Democrat on the Foreign Rela-tions Committee, said in a telephone interview that he was disappointed at White House reluctance to furnish information for the committee's confirmation hearings, which are scheduled to begin Friday. "We've been working like banshees to try to get all the material we can," the Rhode Island Democrat said. He added that other sources of information, including former President Richard Nixon, the General Services Administration and the House Judiciary Committee, had raised a variety of legal problems about assisting the Dem-

An aide, Alfred Friendly Jr., said the adviser was attacking the press, not the Senate, and Mr. Brzezinski himself said in that interview, "I rather suspect there may be some people, outside of the Senate, perhaps people who write stories, who would thoroughly enjoy another spectacle

But he first referred to a witch hunt when asked what Sen. Pell would have to do to get the information he sought from files of the National Security Council.

"If he can indicate what specific documents he wants," Mr. Brzez-inski said, "and if they are in our jurisdiction, and if we determine that it is correct to make them available, we certainly will do so. We have nothing to hide, but at

Finally, in a passage that caused committee staff members considerable concern, according to committee sources, he suggested that a request, even if it met his other standards, might be inadequate if it came just from the committee's Democrats. Although increasing the military budget a percentage point to pla-cate conservatives may not sound like much, a 1-percent increase in a $200-billion military budget would cost $2 billion, or more than enough to run the District of Columbia for a year. Yet that same $2 billion would not buy much in the way of superweapons. One Nimitz nuclear aircraft carrier, without its planes, costs more than $2 billion, and a single Trident submarine armed with missiles is running just about $2 billion.

Mr. Carter's final military budg-et provides money for the new MX land missile, Cruise missiles to be 1972, Mr. Weinberger said: launched from bombers, more Navy warships, Army XM-1 tanks, Marine equipment pre-positioned in the Indian Ocean theater and research on lasers for space warfare. But more than half the nearly $200-billion budget is earmarked for the care and feeding of soldiers and other personnel costs. Another big slice is devoted to making the. military better prepared to fight by buying needed spare parts.

Promises, Promises

Mr. Reagan, by his own pledges and those in the Republican platform he endorsed, is obliged to do more than all that. His party's platform called for a new bomber, an air defense system, a permanent fleet of warships in the Indian Ocean, faster production of air-craft and a 600-ship Navy, among other things.

a Washington lawyer who was special counsel to the late President Johnson, "is that personal relationships are still enormously important in the life of government." Such a relationship has intertwined the careers of Gen. Haig and Mr. Califano through five administrations. As general counsel to the Army in the early 1960s, Mr. Califano hired Gen. Haig, then a major, from among 10 Army majors to help resettle Cuban refugees after the Bay of Pigs invasion. Later, when Mr. Califano moved up to become chief troubleshooter Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, Gen. Haig moved up with him.

In the next few years, the two men, both hard-driving and ambi-tious, forged a friendship through 16-hour workdays, seven days a week. Mr. Califano admired Gen. Haig's character, his smooth manper and administrative ability. Gen. Haig thought Mr. Califano brilliant. Caught in the unfolding Water-gate scandal in April, 1974, Gen. Haig sought out his old friend for legal advice. According to sources familiar with the incident, Gen. Haig was concerned because he had been ordered to testify before a congressional Watergate inquiry. He asked Mr. Califano, who was

Mr. Califano and Gen. Haig continued to see each other whenever Gen. Haig was in Washington or Mr. Califano was in Europe.

Then, 18 months after Mr. Califano left the Carter administration, Gen. Haig was chosen by President-elect Reagan. When it became apparent that he might be treated roughly by some Democratic members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Gen. Haig turned again to Mr. Califano.

OPEC's Test for Reagan

Oil prices rose again at the turn of the year and, everybody says, OPEC did it. Relentless and remorseless OPEC has unlimited power to raise oil prices as high and as fast as it pleases because it has a highly disciplined cartel's deadly hold on the world's oil supply. Right?

Hardly. OPEC, as an attempted cartel, has had very little influence on oil prices for the past five years. It had no influence at all on oil prices during the great rise in 1979, and it is baving none now. Instead, the highly diverse nations that export oil are now following their own highly diverse pricing strate-gies. There is no difference between the behavior of the oil-exporting countries that belong to OPEC and those - Britain, Mexico, Norway and so forth - that do not.

The idea of a great conspiratorial cartel, highly organized and all-powerful, is a total illusion - and a destructive one, because it leads people to the wrong remedies. If OPEC really were an operative cartel imposing oil price increases, it would make sense to think about cartel-busting. But since the cartel cannot, in fact, control pricing, the talk about busting it up is merely a diversion from the kind of countermeasures that can make a difference.

The world might well be better off if OPEC really were an effective cartel, since it would probably choose a far more cautious course than its more euphorically radical members are now pursuing. The OPEC meeting in Indonesia last month was actually a process of feeling out the various members' different intentions and then writing a communique that accommodated all of them. Since the various member governments would not bend to a single policy, the policy had to be bent to the members. As usual, it was Libya that wanted to go furthest. And the other extreme, Saudi Arabia, with the most at stake, continues to be the most restrained

The Saudi Arabians have for some time sought to return to a unified OPEC pricing schedule. They continued their high rate of production into 1980 apparently for the pur-pose, among others, of flooding world markets and discouraging the radicals from leapfrogging the prices upward again. By last summer, that tactic was showing signs of succeeding. The Iranians, in their revolutionary fervor, were charging $5 a barrel more than the Saudi Arabians for the identical grade of oil -- and they were having great trouble selling it. Price, not mismanaged production technology, was the essential reason for the severe drop in Iranian exports.

Then came the war between Iraq and Iran. That wiped out the world's small surplus of oil, and with it the Saudi Arabians' hopes for a unified OPEC price. Now prices have gone up again, each government charging whatever it judges the market will bear.

When will prices rise again, and how much? If the high flyers — like Iran last sum-mer — begin to have trouble finding buyers, prices will slow down. If not, they won't. It depends on the customers, not OPEC.

The incoming Reagan administration needs to think carefully about that. U.S. economic growth has twice created surging demand for imported oil. In a tight worldwide market, any disruption can bring a leap in prices, which in turn throws the industrial countries into inflationary recession. It happened once under President Richard Nixon and again under President Carter. The pattern is evident.

The test of the new administration's energy policy is to prevent it from happening a third time under President Reagan.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Toward a More Perfect Union

The new year has brought the admission of Greece to the European Economic Community - and with it, a welcome sign that northern Europe is beginning to take seriously its responsibilities to its southern neighbors. Like Portugal and Spain, which are negotiating for entry now, Greece is once again a thriving democracy after years of sti-fling rightist dictatorship. The stability and development of the poorer democracies are in the urgent interest of a strong, united Europe --- and the United States.

The entry of Greece will cost the Common Market $1.8 billion in economic aid during the next five years. That cost will triple before Portugal and Spain are also integrated. There are other problems ahead. Free movement of labor, capital and goods means that additional millions of southern workers will lation will increase 20 percent to 315 million. Its area will expand 50 percent. Its gross domestic product will edge ahead of that of the United States. It will have half the votes in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, the economic coordinating center for the industrial democracies. And Greece's 4,600 ships will make the market the world's most powerful maritime bloc, with a third of the world's merchant shipping tonnage. The Common Market's trade already exceeds that of the United States.

Size will bring new tensions. The Nine already have a harder time agreeing since Britain, Denmark and Ireland were added to the Six in 1973. Britain, for example, has always been less committed to political union than the earlier members. And vocal groups in Greece as well as Britain oppose even the further economic union the Common Market is seeking. Recession and inflation, by the way, have not broadened anybody's vision. Twelve nations will make consensus still harder to achieve. The community of 12 could also turn into a "two-speed Europe," with the poorer coun-tries lagging behind with the rest. But the Common Market has, over a bumpy road, overcome far more serious strains. And its history shows that the poorer countries, such as Italy and Ireland, benefit more than the rich; the odds are that Greece, Spain and Portugal will, too.

Crises of Faith — East and West

By Stephen Klaidman

PARIS — The New York Times' Peking in their professions of Marxist-Leninist faith cent of it — has voted into office as presi-gun a five-part series of articles on China ings of central planning, not to mention cans consider intellectually unfit. French with an attempt to document what the Communist Party newspaper, The People's Dai-ly, calls "a crisis of faith in Marxism." He chronicles the skepticism of young adults toward Communism and their opportunism in using the party for personal ends. He quotes a young man as saying, "I know that what I have to do to get ahead is say the right things, memorize the current line and curry favor with my superiors."

Slogans of Revisionism

But these quotes from Deng Xiaoping, China's paramount leader in everything but title, are even more telling: "Practice is the sole criterion of truth" and "the purpose of Socialism is to make the country rich and strong."

The quotations are slogans of pragmatism and modernization, not Marxism and Maoism. They suggest that the way to cure the crisis of faith is not so much to strengthen Marxism as to revise it.

There is substantial resistance to Mr. Deng's brand of revisionism, especially in the bureancracy and the army. And it is hard to know to what extent Mr. Butter-field's handful of sources represent the attitudes of one billion Chinese.

One thing seems certain, though: China's septuagenarian but vigorous leadership is hard at work trying to turn that vast nation away from what they view as the economi-cally bleak road of Socialism onto the humpy but more promising one of capitalism.

Kevising Doctrine

Meanwhile in Eastern Europe, Hungari-ans, Poles and Yugoslavs have been seeking ways to deal with their own crisis of faith in Marxism for more than a quarter century. Through the use of market mechanisms, private farming and worker self-management, these countries, too, have been trying to revise fundamental doctrine.

oters, a species defined at least in part by democratic centralism. its political cynicism, are questioning the moral fitness of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. If the British were to vote tomor-row, the polls say, they would happily turn out Mrs. Thatcher. And even Helmut Ironically, though, the Socialist East is looking to Western capitalism for salvation at a time when the West, too, is experiencing a crisis of faith. It is not as profound as the crisis confronting China, Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union because it comes on top of two generations of success rather than two generations of failure.

But is is more perplexing, because there are no obvious capitalist remedies. Margaret Thatcher's version of monetarism has been tried and found wanting in Britain, and the supply-side economics of men like Arthur Laffer and Lewis Lehrman has generated more fear than faith in the United States. Since the coining of the word "stagflation" in response to the simultaneous increase in inflation and slowdown in economic growth that followed the first oil shock of 1973-1974, there has been no promise of long-term expansion and sus-tained low inflation.

Sense of Impotence

As a result, the loss of faith in the East is paralleled by, at the least, a momentary sense of impotence in the West. Many of the classic economic idols have been broken, as has the Victorian faith in man's ability overcome any obstacle by the sweat of his brow and the power of his diligently applied intellect.

Some seers have been predicting for years that the West is heading into a prolonged period of diminishing expectations; a time during which the young people who are coming onto the job market will have to set-tle for less than their parents have, in which bankruptcies will outnumber successful new efits of detente.

Haig: Loyal, () Yes, But to The Public?

By Philip Geyelin

WASHINGTON - The case for Gen Alexander Haig as secretary of state is that he is authoritative, articulate, well. schooled in the diplomatic aris at the feet of Henry Kissinger, much-admired by Expope's leaders as a consequence of his NATO command, possessed of a time "strategic sense."

And, what is more, his supporters say, is is the only Reagan Cabinet choice who has proven himself in the "vortex" of high crisis In the next breath, we are told that it would be a very bad thing for the country if the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in eamining Gen. Mediocre Leadership A Romanian official confided to a recent visitor that, in his view, one of the world's most serious problems was the mediocnity of leadership in both Moscow and Washington. There is no Roosevelt nor even a Truman on the world stage today. Neither is there a Stalin or a Khrushchev.

Schmidt in West Germany is beginning to have some political difficulties.

The crisis of faith is worldwide; both eco-nomic and political. There may be an excep-tion here and there, like Japan, which succeeds despite a poverty of oil and other raw materials by virtue of extraordinary sense of national unity and purpose. But for the most part, the East has given up on its system and the West doesn't know how to get its economic and political machinery

Tunning properly again. The resulting lack of confidence breeds distrust on all sides. The United States can't be sure why the Soviet Union invaded Af-guanistan and therefore assumes the worst - perhaps, in part, correctly - that it is a first step in a strategy to dominate Galf oil supplies. The Soviet Union worries also, perhaps correctly — that Ronald Reagan means it, when he threatens to use the pow-etful U.S. economy to forge ahead in the arms race. China fears the economic and military might of both superpowers. And Western Europe, which lies in easy reach of Soviet conventional and nuclear attack, is not really sure that it is defensible or that its economies can move ahead without the ben-

A Watershed for Namibia

Black African leaders in the United Nations and elsewhere hope that the year 1981 will end with only one white-ruled state left on the entire continent - South Africa. They hope that the emergence of a black-ruled, and almost certainly SWAPO-ruled, Namibia (South-West Africa) into independence will ring up the curtain for the last act: the assault upon apartheid.

The wiser among them accept that, even with black Africa glaring across the Orange River as well as across the Limpopo, it may be a very prolonged last act.

But the beginning may be made on Wednesday, when South Africa, SWAPO, the political parties within Namibia where the Turnhalle Alliance runs the semi-autonomous government at Windhoek, and the five Western "contact states" (Britain, Canada, France, West Germany and United States) meet at Geneva to arrange pre-independence elections

The South African government has drawn

last-minute hope from the election of Ronald Reagan. They are making all they can of the danger that if SWAPO comes to power under Sam Nujoma's leadership a new Marxist-oriented state will hold a key stategic location in southern Africa with control over vital materials like uranium and platinum ...

Nevertheless, South Africa cannot prevaricate much longer without forcing the United Nations to bring the ponderous machinery of sanctions into action. From South Africa's point of view, this would produce a confrontation with the West at the wrong time on the wrong issue. It is rather an attempt by the exultant Africa after Namibia to use United Nations sanctions to change South Africa's internal race policies that would give Pretoria. its first real chance of dividing the United Nations decisively. Depending on how a SWAPO-dominated Namibia behaved, South Africa might have a favorable moment. to stage an effective counterattack in many, by then frightened, Western capitals.

PARIS - Today's editorial in the Herald reads: "It is in the power of the German Emperor to restore public confidence in the maintenance of peace as easily as he shook that confidence. All that His Majesty need do is to make a speech officially outlining his pacific intentions. A short speech would suffice, a speech no longer than the bombshell declaration he made in Tangier, to the consternation of all lovers of peace. The Emperor has not hitherto let slip many opportunities to speak in public: and it is to be regretted that he should for once observe a sphinxlike silence at the very moment when the sound of his voice uttering words of peace would be most welcome."

Fifty Years Ago anuary 5, 1931

PARIS - Bleak rain fell yesterday on a Paris plunged in deep mourning by the news of the death of Marshal Joffre, eternal hero of the Marne. Marshal Joffre, last of three great war figures, with Marshal Foch and Georges Clemenceau, will be laid to rest on Wednesday in his own peaceful garden at Louveciennes, Paris. The nations of the world will pause to pay homage to one of those great commanders whose initiative and courage contributed so tremendously to the eventual victory of the allied forces. The fine old warrior, worn out by a final illness, tenaciously defied death to the last of human endurance. It was the sort of battle he urged his poilus to wage in 1914 on the banks of the Marne.

The Soviet Union tolerates these deviations from the faith and has, at times, deviated itself, by offering production incentives, among other things. Even economists in countries as orthodox

Poland without Socialism was rich, morally in good health and a prosperous country. lysts who are cutting their forecasts of energy demand for the rest of the century are suggesting that the gain in conservation represents a fundamental shift in the nation's energy picture. The Energy Department recently reduced its estimate of the growth in energy demand through 1990 to 1 percent annually, the latest in a series of reductions from a forecast of 2.5 percent two years ago. This contrasts with an overall growth in the use of energy of about 4.3 percent a year in the decade before the 1973 Arab oil em-

The evidence is that people are responding to high prices a lot more than we had expected," said Roger Naill, director of the department's Office of Analytical Services

Demand Forecast

Similarly, Exxon now predicts that U.S. demand for energy in the year 2000, measured in barrels of oil will be 5 million barrels-a-day less than its prediction just last year of 51 million (42-gallon) barrels. In 1980, the United States consumed the energy equivalent of 38.3 million barrels of oil daily, against 39 million in 1979.

This new emphasis on the re-sults and the possibilities of reduced demand comes at a time when President-elect Reagan has been stressing policies to enhance production and has been playing down conservation as less conse ouential.

But conservation advocates are promising a noisy battle to make sure their cause receives a hearing in the new administration.

But no informed analyst goes so far as to argue that conservation is the sole answer to U.S. energy problems. The Reagan forces point out that conservation in itself creates no new energy.

"If the entire Persian Gulf crupted tomorrow, our 10 percent improvement in energy efficiency would look pretty futile," observed Daniel Yergin, a director of the In-ternational Energy Seminar at Harvard University's Center for International Affairs and a strong conservation advocate.

Nevertheless, John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation predicts that the world will never again use as much OPEC oil as it did in 1979, when 31.3 million barrels-a-day were consumed. Ultimately, analysis say, members of the cartel would have to compete in a shrinking international market.

Reubin Askew, who last week resigned as " Sident Carter's trade representative to go eck to his Miami law practice, is equally firm insisting that the Japanese show a greater use of international responsibility. continue upward mobility of their people through excessive penetration of others' markets is risky." Despite the fact that he and his negotiating team have found dealing with the Japanese a tedious art ("every concession is like pulling teeth," said Mr. Hormats), Mr. Askew thinks Japan is moving in the right direction

On the controversial and contentions auto trade problem, Mr. Askew knows that Japan could have helped enormously by agreeing to buy more parts from the United States, and especially by certifying U.S.-made parts as replacements for the growing volume of Japa-nese cars on American roads. But Japan has held parts imports to a trickle, and has done nothing about allowing its auto dealers in the States to use U.S.-made parts in servicing opcrations.

Meanwhile, there have been some hard-won successes. New agreements have been reached that will increase U.S. exports of tobacco and lumber products to Japan.

Telephone Acccord

Mr. Askew also has brought to a conclusion the effort begun by his predecessor at the trade office, Robert Stranss, to get the Japanese to open up the Nippon Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s procurement to U.S. bidders. But Mr. Askew frankly concedes that U.S. industry and labor are skeptical "as to how much really will be in it for us."

U.S. high-technology producers — among the world's most advanced — expect increas-ing competition in U.S. markets from very efficient Japanese producers of communications equipment and related machines. They think that some U.S. penetration of NIT — the larg-est public telephone system in the world — is crucial to staying competitive.

Mr. Askew is pleased that on Dec. 26 the Japanese agreed --- after several years' bickernese are getting better." Mr. Askew grinned, "but they've still got a long way to go." The focusing of headlines on the U.S.-Japa-nese problem, Mr. Askew believes, has had the unfortunate effect of obscuring the multilateral nature of trade. For example, the United States had a $9.9-billion trade deficit with Japan last year. But it also had a whopping $18,1-billion surplus with the European Economic Community, almost double the 1979's $9.3-billion surplus.

When we're looking at a surplus with Enrope twice as large as our deficit with Japan," Mr. Askew said, "we must recognize that measures we insist on with one country may create precedents for our other partners to insist on."

What Mr. Askew is suggesting is that, just as the United States demands "understanding" from Japan, it should expect to be "under-standing" with Europe, which is on the wrong end of an even bigger deficit with the United

The issue will come up forcefully this year in a number of ways in steel and chemicals, but especially on the question of textiles. There, Ronald Reagan will have to juggle protective promises he is said to have made to South Carolina's Sen, Strom Thurmond against the reasonable efforts of Europe to reduce its deficit, with the United States.

Expensive Contract Settlements Expected In Much of Basic U.S. Industry This Year

Many labor economists expect first-year wage increases in major contracts to average about 10 per-cent, slightly above last year's 9.5

Labor leaders say members need uch increases to get even with inflation, which was running at an annual rate of 12.6 percent in November. But pay raises of that size would also make it more difficult for the Reagan administration to bring inflation down. Because wages are such a large part of pro-duction costs, economists look to wage rates as a measure of the so-called underlying inflation rate. The expected settlements could

In a view supported by other economists, Mr. Schlein predicted that the cost of living issue will play an important role in talks between representatives of the na-tion's 600,000 postal workers and the U.S. Postal Service on a contract up for renewal July 20.

"The postal talks ... are antici-pated to be difficult," Mr. Schlein said. "Management, under pressure to cut costs, may seek to roll back union gains won in previous rounds, particularly the 'uncapped' COLA clause," which allows postworkers' pay to keep pace with

Beatrice Outlook Hinges on FTC Appeal

Company's Push to be 'No. 1' Set Back by Ruling

By Robert Metz New York Times Service

7 YORK - Beatrice Foods set out to e the world's largest food company years ago, and seemed to have accom-1 that goal through acquisitions. 'n Kraft, the leader for decades, merged initibiliion-dollar Dart Industries in Sep-T, regaining the top spot.

¹⁶ teach $9.35 billion. Beatrice revenues in ¹⁴ cal year ending Feb. 28, 1981, are ex-¹⁶ to be $8.8 billion. Both companies exby attain annual sales of $10 billion a year s, with Dart & Kraft exceeding that figure estimated $250 million.

Previous Merger

The merger would a save marked Beatrice's first venture into staurant business - Evans, besides manuning pork sausage in four Middle West u.s. has 60 restaurants, mostly in Otio. anice had trouble with a previous merger, ng run afoul of the Federal Trade Comion over its 1978 acquisition of Tropicana incis. Recently, FTC Administrative Law te James Timony ruled that the acquisition illegal. If the ruling holds - Beatrice is caling - it will be a major setback to Bea-'s growth.

idge Timony told Beatrice to divest itself Propicana. In an added step regarded as a in legal circles, he ordered the company ay the U.S. Treasury all the profits earned sTropicana while it was a Beatrice subsidi-Tropicana is contributing $400 million in and $60 million of Beatrice's $300 million unual profits.

While the divestiture could stand on appeal,

Wall Street analysts generally do not think it will, and it is difficult to find anyone who believes the company will have to pay the Tropicana profits to the Treasury.

But the stock market does not like uncertainty and, despite widespread recommenda-tions of Beatrice at its lowest prices in more than four years, the shares have been de-pressed. Beatrice closed Friday on the New York Stock Exchange at 19%, compared with a 12-month high of 24%

Judge Timony attacked the Tropicana acquisition on a number of grounds. He noted that Beatrice, through its Dixie Sunshine brand, was already entering the chilled juice market at the time of the acquisition, although penetration was only 0.35 percent. Tropicana, the industry leader, holds more than 30 per-cent of the chilled orange juice market. The frozen juice market is more than twice as large The judge's decision to exclude frozen concen trate in his evaluations has been criticized by a Wall Street expert,

Troublesome Issue

That expert, Calvert Crary, the inigation an-alyst for Bear, Stearns & Co., believes the judge will probably be reversed by the full FTC or by the court of appeals. He thinks the most troublesome of the many issues raised by Judge Timony is the potential for expansion of Beatrice's own brand, Dixie Sanshine.

Dairy entry into the chilled orange juice market is easy; milk processing equipment can be flushed with boiling water and used without Before the Tropicana acquisition, Beatrice had expanded its processing capability from three plants to 12 and had intended to go national within 18 months.

While ease of market entry opens the field to many regional dairies, Beatrice was found by the judge to have the unique ability to enter this business on a national level since it already had the equipment and the distribution capability.

In addition to Beatrice's pote petitor, the judge raled that the ly foreclosed competition ber and Tropicana and said further sition would entrench Tropicana leader.

Anthony Ludovici, an analyst ident of Tucker, Anthony & I said he thought the market for than discounted the risks inherent ture case that could take one to adjudicate.

Serious Effort

He called attention, in recon shares to clients, to the fact that had made a "serious effort" to company's margins to keep its 2 of unbroken sales and carnings The effort included management reassignments as well as the sal of low-margin operations in the reation areas.

Mr. Ludovici said that, w growth in the current fiscal year to be about 4 percent over the and substantially below the 10-annual rate of growth establis years, "we believe management" strategies will return this compartional standards of growth." At the time of Mr. Ludovici's tion, the stock was 17 and the dividend meant a yield of more cent_

WHEN YOU'RE A LEADING FORCE IN DUTCH INSUR ANCE THE RESULTS CAN SHOW UP ANY WHERE.

As one of the largest Dutch insurance groups operating from the sound and profitable base of The Netherlands, we have naturally made substantial investments abroad.

We are, for example, involved in the insurance of a number of major development projects in the Middle East. Our earnings in the Middle East taken together with the contributions from our businesses in South and North America, the Caribbean, and Europe including the U.K. amounted, in 1979, to 23% of Ennia's total revenues, and total assets now exceed Dft.10 billion. Sustained and balanced growth at home and abroad is our objective and we have established a good record of this to the benefit of both shareholders and policyholders. If you have an interest in the insurance industry, or simply in the success of an international business with an increasing reputation for balanced growth -- you should have documented information about Ennia.

Please contact us for a copy of our corporate brochure. Ennia N.Y., Churchillplein 1, The Hague, The Netherlands. Tel: (070) 727272. Telex: 31657.

THE BOOK OF PREDICTIONS By David Wallechinsky, Amy Wallace and Irving Wallace Morrow. Illustrated. 513 pp. $12.95.

YOU probably already know that in 1982, antomobile gas rationing will take effect throughout the Western world. That by 1985 most family homes will have flushless toilets that compost wastes. That in 1989 nuclear war will break out between India and Pakistan, destroying major popula-tion centers. That by 2028, solar-powered satellites will be supply-ing 90 percent of the world's energy. And that by 2030, $10 will barely buy a cap of coffee. This news won't come as much of a surprise to you.

But had you realized that in 1989, Roger Maris' home run record of 61 will be broken by someone hitting 63 of them? That by 1993, the potential for "leisure nots" will have increased, according to Ozay Mehmet, professor of economics at the University of Ottawa in Ontario, Canada; that "the lack of sufficient, diverse, accessible, consumer-oriented leisure op-portunines and the growing avail-ability of large blocks of free time will result in the clamoring for the dismantling and destruction of fa-cilities which do not respond to increased demands for personal fulfillment"? Are you ready for that? Had it dawned on you that in the year 2000, it's going to be Ja-pan that places the first prototype solar-power generating station-in orbit? That by 2024, menstruation will be optional? And that by 2030, "people of 21 years and un-der will no longer be deformed, sick, stupid, neurotic, undernour-ished, or even ugly," at least according to an economist named Felix Kaufmann? Are you pre-pared for these eventualities?

Few Surprises Actually. I'm afraid, surprises like the forgoing are rather few and far between in "The Book of Predictions," another collection of lists by the novelist Irving Wallace, his daughter Amy, and his son Da-vid Wallechinsky. Mostly, it's oil ranning out, and computers get-ting smarter, and the Communist regime getting overthrown in the Soviet Union, and the world ending in either fire or ice. Things we can predict for ourselves, and al-ready have. And this in part ac-counts for why "The Book of Pre-dictions" isn't quite up to "The People's Almanac" or "The Book of Lieft" or the Book of Lists" or their respective offspring. Sure, "The Book of Predictions" has that seductively cluttered look of its predecessors --- with its headlines and subheads and half a dozen different sizes of type. It is full of the same sort of charmingly irrelevant illustrations: one of them a photo of what looks like a ragged flashlight beam against a starry night sky, with the caption under-neath: "Could a comet such as this have struck the Earth around 1500 B.C.?" And, like its forebears, "Predictions" has the sort of breadth that makes you feel as though you've gotten your money's worth - with a section for predicby all sorts of experts; a section for prognostications by seers, psychics and science-fiction writers; and a catchall section full of everything from prediction contests with actual prizes, to "The 18 Greatest Predictions of All Time." But there's something tedious and, yes, predictable about most of the predictions. For one thing, the experts tend to forecast along the lines of their specialties, so that, not surprisingly, Albert Ellis, the sexologist who wrote "Sex Without Guilt," predicts that in the fun there will be more sex with guilt, while Shere Hite, the franist sex-researcher, foresees that 2000, sexual intercourse "will be as popular as it is today"

For another thing, the engi-take their assignments with mar al solemnity. Arthur C. Clarke, science-fiction writer, and H Stine, a consultant on indust research and development, e fect moved to explain that don't really know what will i pen in the future, but are only trapolating from the past ( Erskine Caldwell, the novelist, Willard Espy, the language pur betray any marked degree whimsy in their approaches tr future. Caldwell predicts the 2030 "the law of gravity wi repealed and face-lifts will longer be necessary," while forecasts that in 2027, the U.S. preme Court will decide nonns and verbs which con

Oregon Bank Customer Is Unlucky In Surprise Withdrawal Slip Lottery I mited Press Inte

PORTLAND, Ore. - A 79-year-old regular customer of a savings and loan bank was taken into custody and handcuffed last week because he inadvertently used a withdrawal slip on which someone had written a robbery note.

Police spokesman Dan Noelle said the man was released after it was found that the bag he was carrying contained only a can of soda pop and that the writing on the note was not his.

Mr. Noelle said the man picked up a withdrawal slip from a counter and did not realize that someone had written the robbery note on the back as he filled out the front. He said the teller saw the note when she turned the slip over to stamp it. The note said:

"This is a holdup. 1 have a gun and a bomb. Don't create a commotion."

The teller rang the alarm and two patrolmen arrested the man.

"You can see who's behind it," he said. "It's the French government. The rules are being written for Renault." He was referring to new regulations that ban the acrodynamic side skirts that have kept the Cosworth-Ford powered cars competitive with the more powerful turbo-charged Renault.

"Goodyear's being asked to provide tires for Renault and Michelin to beat," Ecclestone said. "It was clear to me eight months ago, but 1 when I said it, people laughed at me. What the French government won't do to win the world championship is unbelievable."

Jabbe Crombac, a spokesman for the Fed-eration International du Sport Aum (FISA), denied that it was a matter of the Paris-French championship in Grand Prix racing.

"A battle of the Latins versus the Anglo-Saxons," he said. "I would go along with that. It happens that the Latin countries got year. Instead, they have initiated a series of

"Goodycar is a victim of the French dom- _ the majority of the seats on the FISA execu-

However, Crombae suggested that the dispute is deeper than that. The French and Italian teams that have aligned themselves with the sport's governing body are all supported by major European car makers. Ferrari is backed by Fiat, and Talbot is owned by Peugot, Renault and Alfa-Romeo are both state owned. For them, racing is a way of promting the sales of their autos.

Before last year, Ecclestone's group had exercised de facto control of Formula One. These manofacturers see that we've built the sport up till it's an incredible success," he said. "They just want to use it to sell cars, and then when somebody in their advertising department says to, they'll leave, and all that will be left is rubble."

Rebels With a Cause

"What you must remember is that the new group is really the old group," Crom-back responded. "They've just been away a little while. Until Mercedes-Benz withdrew based group changing the rules to insure a from racing in 1955, major auto manufacturers were always involved in Formula One.'

lawsuits in an attempt to force the race organizers to run the races under the old rules. Most parties agree that the matter will probably be resolved by the courts before the race at Long Beach, the first event that will have a full complement of entries. The problem of providing all the former Goodyear teams with tires may be even less easily resolved. Michelin said it will not supply any additional teams with tires. Pirelli has limited its involvement to making tires for Toleman, a new team that will not enter a car until midseason. Ecclestone has apparently purchased some old racing tire molds of the correct size from Firestone. But the rubber compounding and inner construction of a racing tire are something of an art form, and without the very best in tires, no car can win races. M. & H., a small race-tire manufacturer in Massachusetts, has offered to build tires, hut the cost would be substantial. An engineer from another tire company estimated that tires could be produced for as little as $150 each. But to support the development program necessary to make the tires competitive would double that price. A team rons many more miles in practice than in actual races. A two-car team uses 500 10 600 tires in the course of a season - adding up to a tire bill of nearly $200,000 a year.

By Michiko Kakutani New York Times Service

NEW YORK - It is 11 a.m., and strains of Chopin float down the stairs of the town house. Katharine Hepburn, who has already been up nearly six hours, is just finishing two and a half hours of practicing the piano — a daily regimen required by her lat-est role — and now she is late for rehearsals. At the age of 71, dressed in tan gabardine trousers, a black turtleneck and hiking boots, she still looks, in her own words, "tall, skinny and very determined." The face is angular, the manner sharp, and the voice loud and assertive, with that distinctive Bryn Mawr edge, as she tells - no, directs - a visitor to hurry. Slinging a red sweater around her shoulders, she walks briskly to a nearby ga-rage where she picks up her silver Ford sedan. Though it is but a short taxi or limousine ride across town to the ANTA. Theater, Miss Hepbarn insists on driving there herself. She does not like to depend, she says, on other people. The rehearsals are for her latest project, Ernest Thompson's new play "West Side Waltz," which will tour for six months before coming to Broadway next season. It is the story of two aging women, whose love of mu-sic counterpoints their loneliness and, in the end, brings them together. Miss Hephurn portrays a "rather highbrow pianist," subject to deteriorating health but reluctant to surrender her pride; her co-star, Dorothy Loudon, is a violinist who is eager to be her friend.

tion, Miss Hepburn tries to be as independent as she can. That is why she chose to do her own stunt work — including a leap off a speedboat — during the filming last summer of Thompson's "On Golden Pord" in New Hampshire. And that is presumably why she now drives to work. Certainly there are easier

"I'm a realist," she says, as she cases her car into crosstown traffic. "That's really the trouble with most people today — I think they want it all. Well, you ain't going to get it all. So you might as well forget one thing and concentrate on another.

"If you're an actor, it means you're antomatically self-centered, and if you're self-centered, you should not burden a family. I had the most wonderful childhood of anyone in the world, so I know how much time my parents took with us, and I thought, what would I do if I had a child and the child got sick and we had an opening night? Why, I'd be furious at the child. I can be terribly selfish."

The very fact that acting is a collaborative venture frequently chafes at Miss Hephurn's sense of self. "Td rather have been a great

The declension of filial address begins with a breezy "Howzit goin', Pops?" to a more respectful "About my allowance, Dad," to a resigned and resentful "Yes, Fa-

The frank and entertaining excount of

As Miss Loudon says, "The atmosphere of a rehearsal is always tempered by the so-called leader," and the leader in this case, is 'an opinionated one indeed. Miss Hepburn is fond of quoting her late colleague and companion, Spencer Tracy, whose advice was simply, "Know your lines and don't bump into the furniture," and she has little patience with psychoenalytic talk about acting. She knows her lines by the first day of rehearsals, and she knows them word for word. Indeed she lives by an unspoken but inviolable code of behavior — a decidedly Yankee ethic of hard work, simplicity, privacy and punchali-ty — and when she is working on a play, there is a sense that she expects her colleagues to abide by it as well.

These particular rehearsals are to her liking: they are short, businesslike and unusually intense — six hours a day, six days a week, no chitchat and a 20-minute break for hunch. That hunch is frequently prepared by Miss Hepburn — often for the entire cast. "She not only likes people not to do things for her, but she wants to do everything for everyone else," Noel Willman, the play's director, said. "She hurt her shoulder rather badly last year and she went on lugging logs in for her fire-place — it nearly drove her friends all mad.

There have been many losses over the years - Tracy died in 1967, and her parents are gone - but in work, she has al-ways believed, there is selvation, and in wellearned praise, a certain measure of comfort. "I don't think of myself as very much," she says. "But everyone is very nice to me and fife is softened so much if people come out and say you're wonderful. It's lucky to have been able to con-tinue as long as I have. It gets more compli-cated, though. The older you get, the more intelligent you get, so the more aware you are of where you're rotten.
